

Ashton Barnes Tee Continues To Receive Praise From Top Legal Publication

Guernsey law firm Ashton Barnes Tee has again received praise from top legal research publication the Legal 500.

All three Partners of the firm received praise from the publication, which is recognised as a leading expert commentary on the legal sector worldwide. It is compiled by experts after undertaking a period of in-depth research.

Overall, the firm was described as being 'small but very good', commenting on its litigation-bias and highlighting the reputation it has earned for Trust and Private Client work, including international tax.

Partner Raymond Ashton was named as a 'leading individual' in Guernsey's Private Client, Trusts and Tax work. It noted that he is 'a prolific author with vast experience in cross-border matters and a blue-chip client list'. It pointed to his reputation for being 'very good indeed', with a longstanding track record in complex tax and trust work.

The publication also commented that Partner Nick Barnes 'is held in high regard for reliability, responsiveness, and results-oriented effectiveness in Guernsey law'.

Meanwhile, Partner Clare Tee, the commentary continued, provided 'high standards of service in very complex and high-value international litigation and has a grasp of the finer points of Guernsey procedure as well as a broader tactical sense; in short, she is a good lawyer'.

Clare Tee continues to handle contentious matters in employment law, while the Legal 500 notes that the bridgehead in the firm's employment law department is being built upon through the appointment of Guernsey employment law specialist Advocate Tom Crawford.

Clare Tee, Partner, Ashton Barnes Tee, commented:

“It is extremely pleasing that the hard work we have put in over the past year has been recognised by the Legal 500. Guernsey is a notoriously competitive marketplace but the comments from Legal 500 show that we are continuing to make significant progress in, building an excellent reputation for our expanding range of specialist services.”
